

Champions Teacher dictation text

Pippi Longstocking

Pippi was a very remarkable child, and the most remarkable thing about her was her strength. She was so strong that in all the world there was no policeman as strong as she. She could have lifted a whole horse if she had wanted to. And there were times when she did want to. Pippi had bought a horse of her very own with one of her gold pieces the day she came home to the Vilekulla Cottage. She had always longed to have her very own horse, and now there was one living on her front porch. When Pippi wanted totake afternoon tea there, she simply lifted him out into the orchard without further ado.

Pippi Longstocking by Astrid LindgrenPippi