Match background

Three-time European champions 1. FFC Frankfurt are in a record sixth final against a Paris Saint-Germain team at this stage for the first time on 14 May in Berlin with several former team-mates in opposition. UEFA.com has a full guide to the UEFA Women's Champions League decider at Friedrich-Ludwig-Jahn-Sportpark.

Previous meetings

- These clubs met in the 2011/12 round of 16, Frankfurt winning 4-2 on aggregate.
- Frankfurt won the first leg 3-0 with goals from Fatmire Alushi (now of Paris), Kerstin Garefrekes and Melanie Behringer.
- Paris won the second leg 2-1, and Frankfurt were to reach the final in Munich where they lost to Olympique Lyonnais. Ana-Maria Crnogorčević scored early in the second leg for Frankfurt before Alexandra Long struck twice for Paris.
- Alongside Alushi, Garefrekes and Crnogorčević, Frankfurt also fielded Dzsennifer Marozsán and Svenja Huth.
- The Paris team included Laure Boulleau and Sabrina Dellanoy.
- Overall Frankfurt's record against French teams is P7 W3 D1 L3 F9 A8. That includes the 2012 final, a 2-0 loss to Lyon.
- Paris's only other meeting with a German side apart from their encounter with Frankfurt in November 2011 was in this season's semi-final, where they ended VfL Wolfsburg's unbeaten record with a 2-0 away win and went through despite a 2-1 loss in Paris.

Match background

- Four German sides – Frankfurt (2002, 2006, 2008), Potsdam (2005, 2010), Duisburg (2009) and Wolfsburg (2013, 2014) – have taken the title, with just one victorious club each for the other successful nations: Sweden's Umeå IK (2003, 2004), France's Olympique Lyonnais (2011, 2012) and England's Arsenal LFC (2007).
- No team has won as many titles as Frankfurt's three, and they are in their sixth final, one more than Umeå. As well as 2012, they lost in the 2004 final to Umeå and 2005 decider against Potsdam.
- This is the eighth final in a row (and 12th overall) with German representatives – they won the first three of those before two losses to Lyon, who were then beaten by Wolfsburg 1-0 at Stamford Bridge in 2013 (the second Franco-German final after 2012). Wolfsburg overcame Tyresö FF of Sweden last year in Lisbon.
- This is the fifth final with French representatives, Lyon providing the other four appearances in as many years. Defeated by Potsdam in 2010, they were victorious against the same team a year later, won against Frankfurt in 2012 then lost versus Wolfsburg the following year.

Team facts

- If Paris win, Josephine Henning and Fatmire Alushi would emulate Conny Pohlers by winning the competition with three clubs.
- Henning won with Potsdam (2010) and Wolfsburg (2013, 2014). Alushi triumphed with Duisburg (2009) and Potsdam (2010).
- Henning would also equal the record of four victories jointly held by Pohlers and Viola Odebrecht.
- Alongside Alushi in Duisburg's 2009 champions were Frankfurt's Simone Laudehr and current Paris duo Linda Bresonik and Annike Krahn,
- Paris trio Laura Georges, Shirley Cruz Traña and Aurélie Kaci all won with Lyon in 2011 and 2012.
- Kerstin Garefrekes and Saskia Bartusiak won this competition with Frankfurt in 2006 and 2008.
- Other past winners in the Frankfurt squad include Svenja Huth (Frankfurt 2008) and Bianca Schmidt (Potsdam 2010),
- Frankfurt's Verónica Boquete and Paris midfielder Caroline Seger – who is suspended for the final – were part of the Tyresö side that lost last year's final.
- Paris coach Farid Benstiti reached the 2010 final with Lyon, losing on penalties to a Potsdam team featuring Alushi, Henning and Schmidt in Getafe.
- The Paris squad boasts German internationals in Henning, Krahn, and Alushi. Retired international Bresonik and back-up goalkeeper Ann-Katrin Berger is also from Germany.
- Paris could become only the second team to win this competition without ever having been domestic league champions after Bresonik and Krahn's Duisburg in 2009.

Germany precedent

- While this is the first final in Berlin itself, several previous editions have concluded in Germany, starting with the first UEFA Women's Cup in 2002 where Frankfurt, playing at home, beat Umeå 2-0.
- The other one-off final in Germany was Frankfurt's 2-0 loss to Lyon in 2012 in front of a competition-record 50,125 crowd at Munich's Olympiastadion.
- The other matches were in the old two-legged final:
2004 second leg: Frankfurt 0-5 Umeå (agg: 0-8)
2005 second leg: Potsdam 3-1 Djurgårdens DFF (agg: 5-1)
2006 first leg: Frankfurt 4-0 Potsdam
2006 second leg: Potsdam 2-3 Frankfurt (agg: 2-7)
2008 second leg: Frankfurt 3-2 Umeå (agg: 4-3)
2009 second leg: Duisburg 1-1 Zvezda-2005 (agg: 7-1)
- In her debut European season, Frankfurt's Célia Šašić has scored 13 goals, one behind the record held by Conny Pohlers (2004/05) and Margrét Lára Vidarsdóttir (2008/09).

Competition facts

Competition history / facts

- At its meeting in Paris on 23 May 2000, the UEFA Executive Committee approved the proposal to introduce a European Women's club competition, and thus the UEFA Women's Cup for national league champions came into being.
- For 2009/10 the competition was relaunched as the UEFA Women's Champions League, also allowing entry to the runners-up from the eight top-ranked nations.
- In the first final on 23 May 2002, 1. FFC Frankfurt beat Umeå IK 2-0 with two Steffi Jones goals in the Waldstadion.
- Frankfurt were to pick up further wins in 2006 and 2008. Umeå triumphed in 2003 and 2004 and also lost the 2007 and 2008 finals. A second German team, 1. FFC Turbine Potsdam, took the trophy in 2005. Arsenal LFC won in 2007.
- In 2009 two debutants reached the final, with another German club, FCR 2001 Duisburg, defeating Russia's Zvezda-2005 to emulate both Frankfurt and Potsdam in winning the trophy at their first attempt. Duisburg won the first leg in Russia 6-0 and drew their home leg 1-1 in front of a competition record 28,112 crowd at the MSV Arena.
- In 2009/10 the competition became the UEFA Women's Champions League, with the final be played as a one-off fixture in the same city as the men's UEFA Champions League final, two nights before.
- Winners so far have been 1. FFC Turbine Potsdam (2010 at Getafe CF), Olympique Lyonnais (2011 at Fulham FC, 2012 at Munich Olympiastadion) and VfL Wolfsburg (2013 at Chelsea FC and 2014 in Lisbon).

Women's football in UEFA

- UEFA first became involved in women's football in 1971 when a motion was passed urging national associations to take responsibility for the female game in their countries.
- The first competitive fixture in a UEFA women's competition was played on 18 August 1982 in Vammala when Finland were beaten 6-0 by Sweden in the opening game of qualifying for the UEFA European Competition for Representative Women's Teams. Sweden were to win the final in 1984.
- For the 1991 edition the competition was relaunched as the UEFA Women's Championship.
- The final was played over two legs in 1984. Between 1987 and 1993 there was a four-team knockout final tournament, before a one-off final in 1995. In 1997, 2001 and 2005 there was an eight-team final tournament played every four years, expanded to 12 in 2009. The 2017 final tournament in the Netherlands will include 16 teams.
- From 16 competitors in the 1984 edition, the 2013 tournament began with 45 entrants.
- Germany won in 1989, 1991, 1995, 1997, 2001, 2005, 2009 and 2013. Other than Sweden in 1984, the only other winners were Norway in 1987 and 1993.

National youth teams

- The UEFA European Women's Under-18 Championship was launched in 1997/98 and has run annually ever since, altering to an U19 event in 2001/02. Germany have secured six wins (2000, 2001, 2002, 2006, 2007, 2011) while other champions have been Denmark (1998), Sweden (1999 and 2012), France (2003, 2010 and 2013), Spain (2004), Russia (2005), Italy (2008), England (2009) and the Netherlands (2014). Israel will stage the 2015 finals this summer.
- In 2007/08 the first annual UEFA European Women's Under-17 Championship was held. The first six final tournaments were four-team knockout competition in UEFA's home town of Nyon, Switzerland, with Germany winning three times (2008, 2009, 2012), Spain twice (2010, 2011) and Poland taking the title in 2013.
- For 2013/14 the final tournament became an eight-team event held by pre-selected hosts. England staged the first of those from 28 November to 8 December 2013, won for the fourth time by Germany. There is a reversion to summer dates for 2014/15 (Iceland) and 2015/16 (Belarus).

Women's football development programme (WFDP)

- At its meeting in Prague in December 2010, the UEFA Executive Committee noted the huge growth in the female game on this continent, in both registered players and participation. It agreed to support a new development programme over the period until 2016 via UEFA's HatTrick assistance scheme on behalf of the UEFA member national associations.
- The WFDP envisages expansion at all levels of the sport throughout Europe. The guidance, expertise, advice and resources accompanying the project are intended to give UEFA and its national FAs the chance to put ambitious visions into practice, as well as allowing the associations to advance in accordance with their respective needs.

- In addition, Steffi Jones, the German women's football great, has been appointed as ambassador for the UEFA WFDP. In this newly created post, Jones will work closely with the governing body to further cultivate women's football across the continent.
- UEFA has drawn up a list of values to fit its overall vision of the female game. It pledges to lead the development of all aspects of girls and women's football as a key priority and will endeavour to act as a role model by concrete action and by bringing women into governing positions.
- The chairwoman of the UEFA Women's Football Committee, Karen Espelund, became a full member of the UEFA Executive Committee in the spring of 2012.
