Match background

- Germany began with a 0-0 draw against Sweden.
- Italy will be out with defeat having lost 2-1 to Russia.
- Germany and Italy renew rivalries in Tilburg for what will be their 13th UEFA Women's EURO meeting including qualifiers.
- The last UEFA Women's EURO not to have a Germany v Italy match at any stage was 1995.
- Their biggest duel was the 1997 final won 2-0 by Germany in Oslo. Steffi Jones was among the Germany team.
- In the last two tournaments, Germany tackled Italy in the quarter-finals, triumphing 2-1 in 2009 and 1-0 four years later in what was their most recent encounter.
- Germany and Italy also faced off in three consecutive semi-finals between 1989 and 1993. In 1989 Germany won on penalties after a 1-1 draw and they prevailed 3-0 two years later.
- In 1993 it ended 1-1 in Rimini and Italy edged it on penalties. That remains the last time anyone has eliminated Germany from a UEFA Women's EURO.
- The countries have played each other twice in group stages, with a 1-1 draw in 1997 and a 4-0 German success in 2005.
- Overall, including friendlies, they have met 26 times with Germany winning 14 and Italy four, with eight draws. The goal count is 46-18.
- Italy have never failed to reach the UEFA Women's EURO's last eight while Germany boast a similar record save for the opening editions of 1984 and 1987.

Team facts

Germany (holders)

EURO 2013: Winners

EURO best: Winners (1989, 1991, 1995, 1997, 2001, 2005, 2009, 2013)

How they qualified: Group 5 winners, W8 D0 L0 F35 A0 Pts24

Coach: Steffi Jones

One to watch: Dzszenifer Marozsán (midfielder, Lyon)

What to watch out for: After 22 years and six titles in a row, can Germany's run go on under new coach Steffi Jones, who took over from Silvia Neid following the 2016 Olympic gold. Since Rio the likes of Melanie Behringer, Annike Krahn and Saskia Bartusiak have retired from the team while Jones's finals squad is without injured Alex Popp and Simone Laudehr.

But Germany's depth of resources is unmatched with 2013 final hero Anja Mittag aiming for her fourth Women's EURO title (the first was alongside Jones) while Mandy Islacker, Marozsán, Leonie Maier, Isabel Kerschowski and Almuth Schult are just a few of the other world-class names included. Midfielder Lena Goessling is also included after a long spell out with injury.

Italy

EURO 2013: Quarter-finals

EURO best: Runners-up (1993, 1997)

How they qualified: Group 6 runners-up, W6 D0 L2 F26 A8 Pts18

Coach: Antonio Cabrini

One to watch: Melania Gabbiadini (forward, Verona)

What to watch out for: Only Norway can match Italy's record of qualifying for 11 final tournaments and the Azzurre have never gone out before the last eight of any EURO – but they will not travel to the Netherlands among the favourites. While the Italians lost narrowly to Germany in the 2009 and 2013 quarter-finals, a qualifying campaign in which they were beaten home and away by Switzerland is more representative of their actual form – especially since long-standing forward Patrizia Panico switched to coaching the men's Under-16s.

That is not to undervalue a team with Sara Gama, Alice Parisi and Melania Gabbiadini (sister of Napoli's Manolo), and despite worrying form in some friendlies they did beat Russia 3-0 in Brazil in December.
